

GETTING

THE SUPPORT

YOU NEED

Whether you need assistance accessing disability or mental health supports, are homeless, at risk of homelessness or are looking for Indigenous support services there are a number of funding options available

Government Funding

The government offers grants and funding programs to help people like you access certain supports and services to enhance their wellbeing. There are several Government funding options available for eligible people with disabilities, the homeless and people with mental health issues to fund:

- Accommodation & Tenancy support
- Clinical and Therapeutic support
- Personal and Domestic care
- Developing Life skills
- Community Participation
- Employment, Education and Vocational Training
- Cultural activities for Aboriginal & Torres Strait Islanders

People can also access our services through private health insurance or personal funds.

Private Health Insurance

Private health insurance policies may cover or subsidise certain supports and services. If you have private health insurance, speak directly with your provider to discuss your level of cover and inclusions.

Self-funded

People who would like to access specific supports and services outside of government funding can choose to self-fund.

Our team will guide you through your funding options and find the best solution to your needs.
